

Dear patients and doctors,

July 4, 2022

In January 1978 I came to the U.S. to visit my friend in California. My initial plan to stay there was just five months. I kept extending my stay and forty five years have passed. In those years, a lot of things happened. I moved to Dallas in 1985 and have been practicing acupuncture since. I feel like the American chapter in my life story is ending. Three of our six children who were all born and raised in Texas already moved to Japan and eventually the rest of them will move there as well.

I will be working until the end of August and Masako Wada will take over my practice from September. Masako, a Japanese native, has been practicing Japanese style acupuncture for over twenty years in California and Texas. Along with general acupuncture, she also specializes in facial rejuvenation acupuncture and is also certified in advanced training in Nutrition Response Testing.

I want to thank all of you who believed in me and let me help the healing process. My journey will continue and most likely I will go to acupuncture school in Japan to get my license there.

For those who live near Irving, I recommend Melissa Horton. Her phone number is 214-308-5833.

If there is any change in the office situation, I'll post it on my website:
www.prestonroyalclinic.com.

The last quote I want to share with you is, "The ultimate purpose of the body is to render itself unnecessary."

Sincerely,
Bunzo Takamatsu
